THE EYEBALL END BY ALI MC PDF

'I lit another cigarette and murmured m'rock'm m'roll.' So begins a decade-long descent into worlds far removed from the comfort of middle-class Australia. Beginning with an acid-fuelled night in the Kimberley, the first decade of the 21st century sees Ali MC travelling the globe in an attempt to understand the forgotten corners of the world. Although he is beaten and shot at along the way, Ali encounters some of the most enduring stories the so-called Third World can produce. The Eyeball End steps away from the safety net of well-worn travel guides, taking the reader on a unique and challenging journey into the human condition. The cover of The Eyeball End features the iconic image of a Biafran soldier taken in 1968 by legendary British photojournalist Don McCullin. Ali MC is a Melbourne-based writer, photographer and frontman/producer of New Dub City. Currently studying a Master of Laws, Ali MC has travelled through over thirty countries, and has lived, worked and toured across much of Australia, including the remote Ngaanyatjarra Lands of the Western Desert. He has also held a photographic exhibition titled Burma Faces. The Eyeball End marks his literary debut.

THE EYEBALL END a personal peak into life on the low road of life.

By John Foss

Ali Mc is an Australia writer/musician/filmmaker with a strong desire to see the 'real' world and share its stories. THE EYEBALL END in many ways is an anthology of his travels during the past decade as he criss-crosses the globe with camera and notebook in hand. Not for Ali the beer soaked bars of Bali or Thailand. No Ali chosés to go where most travellers fear to tread... war ravaged Rwanda, battered Beirut, Burma and other war zones most people fear to tread. This is a personal project written in a modern gonzo style. It is open of those books you will find hard to put down. Its stories will stay with you at night. I have recommended this book to many friends. Ali turns his back on the comfort of modern travel and takes us into dark places few get to experience.

Reality can be far stranger than fiction...

By JR

Reality can turn out to be far stranger, than the design that is fiction.

Ali MC has stridently undertaken to relate the realities that he has come across, across the globe.

As someone who has spent time living and working in different parts of Africa and in conflict zones of the Middle East, reading 'The Eyeball End' has gelled so much with me. The communication of his experiences echoes within me, as being so honest, true, and factual.

What Ali MC has related, resounds in me, and makes me recall and re - think much of what I have had experience with.

Thanks.

Five Stars

By Luka Haralampou

Incredible writing and deeply insightful. How travel writing should be - more action packed reflection than voyeuristic indulgence.
